3	(Call to order of the Court.)
4	THE CLERK: Good morning. Please come to attention.
5	The Court is in session. This is the United States Bankruptcy
6	Court, Northern District, California. The Honorable William J.
7	Lafferty presiding.
8	THE COURT: Okay. This is Judge Lafferty, and this is
9	a matter that I especially requested some appearances for, so
10	let's go ahead and call that matter.
11	THE CLERK: Yes, Your Honor. Calling line item number
12	1 for the Roman Catholic Bishop of Oakland, case number 23-
13	34052. The parties are being moved over now, Your Honor.
14	THE COURT: Okay.
15	(Pause.)
16	THE COURT: Okay. So I have nine folks on the screen.
17	Are there more?
18	THE CLERK: These are the parties who accepted the
19	invite to be moved over, Your Honor.
20	THE COURT: Okay. Let's have appearances, please.
21	Why don't we start with the debtor's representatives?
22	MR. LEE: Morning, Your Honor. Matt Lee of Foley and
23	Lardner, appearing for the debtor.
24	THE COURT: Okay. Good morning.
25	MS. RIDLEY: Good morning, Your Honor. Eileen Ridley

	4
1	appearing for the debtor, specifically regarding the adversary
2	proceeding as well.
3	THE COURT: Okay. Let me hear from the committee's
4	representatives.
5	MS. ALBERT: Your Honor, Gabrielle Albert, local
6	counsel for the committee.
7	THE COURT: Okay. Anybody else for the committee?
8	MS. RESTEL: Good morning, Your Honor. Colleen
9	Restel, Lowenstein Sandler, on behalf of the committee.
10	THE COURT: Okay. Great. Okay. I assume the rest of
11	the appearances are insurance company folks. Why don't we go
12	ahead and take the roll call there, please? Okay.
13	MR. PUKLIN: Good morning, Your Honor. Brad Puklin
14	and Clinton Cameron for London Market Insurers.
15	THE COURT: Okay. I don't think I heard Mr.
16	Schiavoni. I think he might have been muted.
17	MR. SCHIAVONI: Sorry, Your Honor. Tancred Schiavoni
18	for
19	THE COURT: Schiavoni. I'm sorry.
20	MR. SCHIAVONI: for Pacific Indemnity
21	THE COURT: I always do that to you. Thank you.
22	MR. SCHIAVONI: That's fine, Your Honor. Pacific
23	Indemnity and PIC.
24	THE COURT: Okay.
25	MR. PLEVIN: Good morning, Your Honor. This is Mark

5 Plevin for Continental Casualty Company. 1 2 THE COURT: Okay. 3 MR. CURET: Good morning, Your Honor. Blaise Curet 4 for Westport Insurance Corporation. 5 THE COURT: Okay. That's everybody, I think. Yes, 6 correct? 7 THE CLERK: Yes, Your Honor. Okay. Well, first of all, thanks to all 8 THE COURT: 9 of you for making yourselves available on a Friday morning. hope you all had a nice Thanksgiving. 10 Not long after I adjourned the hearing on the issue of 11 the ability of the insurance companies, experts and/or 12 professionals to review claims information, it occurred to me 13 that I had elided over something that I shouldn't have. 14 15 maybe it's a nonissue or maybe it's exactly what we're arguing about. I'm not sure. 16 So let me just pose the question to either the 17 18 committee/debtor and/or the insurance companies. Is the issue here whether any information may be shared with the insurance 19 20 companies, experts/professionals, or whether it's just PII? 21 MS. RESTEL: Good morning, Your Honor. Colleen Restel on behalf of the committee. The issue is we have no -- I mean, 22 23 we have no basis to object to any information that's publicly available being shared. It's really the proof of claim forms 24 25 themselves that can make --

THE COURT: Well, let me -- can I stop you there? I mean, in my mind, and you're going to correct me if you think I'm wrong, okay, in my mind, there's a lot of difference between something that could be extracted from a proof of claim form that would tend to show a pattern or would tend to show a tendency or an argument that might be supported by the facts that would be culled from different ways of looking at the information on the claim form, and who the claimant is. Those are two, in my mind, very different questions.

I'm having a hard time understanding why the first category couldn't and shouldn't be shared with not just the insurance companies but also their experts. If their experts are going to be asked to extrapolate and make other arguments based on what is or isn't in the claim forms, putting aside the PII for a second, so do you have a -- I'd like your reaction to that.

MS. RESTEL: Sure. I think the distinction there is that the committee doesn't have any opposition to the experts -- the insurers having experts and the claims and all the information being shared. It's just a matter of the notice and the disclosure to the claimants of who is receiving that information.

THE COURT: Well, again, my same question. Well, let me phrase it slightly differently. Is there a reason why a claimant would care that something in their claim that could not be tied to them personally were shared with an expert so 1

7
 2
    that the expert could assist the insurance companies in making 3 arguments about the correct amount of a claim or a matrix or whatever it is you want to say. Is there a reason why, if that 4
    individual is not identified, that that individual could or 5
    should care about that?
 6
7
             MS. RESTEL: I think the distinction there is determining what information is personally sensitive .
8
9
             THE COURT: Yeah.
             MS. RESTEL: If we're going to -- 10
             THE COURT: No, I hear you. I hear you. I mean, the 11
    person --
             MS. RESTEL: We're talking about the -- 13
                         I mean, look, the person -- I mean, we'll 14
             THE COURT:
15
    get to this in a second. The person's name, I'm not sure why the experts need to know that right away; although, they may 16
    have arguments that there are some fraud issues that we might 17
18
    be getting to down the road. And I'm happy to hear about
            I'm not sure we're there yet.
19
    those.
             But something like, for example, maybe the year of 20 birth, without the actual date of birth, would be relevant 21 because maybe one would look at a damage issue differently if 22
23
    the victim were fourteen than if the victim were twenty, for 24 example. I mean, that's kind of the level at which I'm trying 25
    to parse this.
```

Now, is there another reason why putting aside something that would link the information, and I deeply believe and agree with you this is traumatic, it's traumatic whether it happened yesterday or thirty years ago, it doesn't matter, it's traumatic, but if we can shield the identity of the person from the rest of the information subject to the insurance companies telling me at some point they may need that as well to do some sort of fraud check or something along those lines or double counting check or whatever you want to call it. Putting that aside for a second, is there a reason why the rest of the information couldn't and shouldn't be shared so their experts can do what experts do, which is extrapolate from a big bunch of information down to patterns and arguments and tendencies and numbers?

MS. RESTEL: Sure. I think the difference is something like the year of birth or where the abuse occurred. I think that that's something that definitely, as long as that couldn't be tied back to the claimant, I don't think that that's what the issue is. I think it more goes to the narrative of the abuse that occurred that a claimant may not want -- they may just want to know the universe of who that's shared with.

THE COURT: Well, again, if it isn't tied back to them individually, what is the -- what's the concern or what's the due process issue if it's not -- if one could not otherwise say, okay, that happened to John Doe.

MS. RESTEL: Well, I think that the issue is if you look at the proofs of claims, some of the descriptions of the abuse are very detailed, and sometimes, the description of the abuse (audio interference) necessarily narrow the number of people it could be.

THE COURT: Okay. Okay. Okay. All right. Does anybody else want to speak to this from the debtor/committee side of things before I turn to the insurance companies and ask them a couple of questions?

MR. LEE: Not for the debtor, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you very much, and by the way, thank you, Ms. Restel. That was extremely helpful. I appreciate it.

Let me turn to the insurance companies and ask, well, you see where I'm going with this, right? I mean, I can see why it would be very helpful to professional/experts to have information from which they can extract the data that they need to have to do what they're going to do, which is to offer opinions about things like valuations or matrices or whatever else you want to call it, without necessarily, at the moment, having to know what's the name of the person associated with this event.

So if I were to carve this that way for now, is that helpful, or do you have another thought about this?

MR. SCHIAVONI: So Your Honor, this is Tanc Schiavoni from O'Melveny. If I can just sort of, like, just put this in context. I mean, our clients handle personal injury actions all the time, many of which involve all kinds, like putting aside sexual abuse, involve all kinds of sensitive information, medical subject to HIPAA, and other sorts of things. And you know, we're sensitive to how this material is handled. We have a huge self-interest for various reasons to be very careful about not sharing it willy nilly, not sharing unless it's really absolutely necessary with experts.

So there are some experts we would use to do things, say, for instance, like an allocation of claim periods. Okay? I don't need to give that person the narrative data in the so-called proofs of claim. I don't need to do that. But it is an important issue here about sort of who these people are.

I have a claim in a Diocese in New York case where the person has made serial claims, which was the subject of argument just last week in Syracuse, the subject of serial allegations in other cases and before the Social Security Administration, where they found that the person had made fraudulent claims, et cetera, et cetera. All right.

So we need some ability to provide the names of the people to the expert in the right circumstances.

THE COURT: But wait a minute. Let me ask you a question. Why is that the expert's job, I mean, if you happen to know somebody's filed a claim. You, Mr. Schiavoni, who are a leading insurance company litigator on these issues, why does your expert have to know the claim for you to match them up with something that you think is troubling in another case or duplicative of another case?

MR. SCHIAVONI: Your Honor, I'm a partner, a lawyer at O'Melveny.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. SCHIAVONI: I do not investigate individual claims as a general matter. It's not my skill set, so to speak, in some instances. I will say, in that particular case, we were the ones to run the search of the Social Security Administration, but other things we did, in Boy Scouts, there were handwriting experts that looked at and found literally forged proofs of claim, hundreds of them (audio interference).

THE COURT: Okay. Well, but yeah, there were also 80,000 claims. There were also 80,000 claims in that case, and we're talking about a different universe here.

MR. SCHIAVONI: I hear, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SCHIAVONI: But also just to understand this, okay, we submitted an affidavit in connection with this that shows that almost half or more of the claimants publicly filed their complaints with their names in the complaints, who they alleged the abuser was, and some description of the abuse.

In the tort system, there is not anonymity preventing the parties from exercising their rights under the Federal Rules and the Rules of California practice to use experts. There just isn't. It's like the experts have to sign confidentiality agreements and be careful. But you're not -- one isn't prohibited. It's like that's just not what happens in the tort system. And in fact, they're publicly filing the complaints. That's what the affidavit says.

So we have a huge interest in exercising due care and being cautious, but putting burdens on us from just doing basic investigations if we need to. And you know, candidly, the other thing that did come out in Boy Scouts, when the trustee assumed the role she now has, and she's appointed with the consent of the claimants, she recently applied and got approval for antifraud protections to be put in place. She asked for confidentiality on specifically exactly what she was doing to check and confirm the claims, and that was granted by Judge Christine.

So to put us in the position of having to disclose exactly who we're using and when we're using them, it's not contemplated by the Federal Rules or by state practice. For instance, like just to give you an example here, it's like if we were to -- if I were to decide, look, maybe now is the time to use a jury consultant. Normally, I would not disclose that to my adversary. I'm not suggesting I want to disclose necessarily proofs of claim to a jury consultant, but I wouldn't necessarily go to my adversary and say, oh, let me tell you, now is the time we've selected to use a jury consultant, and here's who it is. It's invasive to just the basic process here.

We would want to be extremely careful here about how we're handling things, but half the claimant's names are already in the public system. It's like they're in Docket Search if you just look for them there. Is that responsive to your question, Your Honor? I think (audio interference).

THE COURT: No. Partly. But as usual, like a good lawyer, you're trying to steer me in a different direction. I appreciate that. You're really good at that. Partly, it is.

MR. SCHIAVONI: I got carried away, I think, is what I did.

THE COURT: No, no, that's fine. I mean, it's fine. I always learn something. Okay. That's fine.

Does anybody else want to be heard? I have some further thoughts, but before I express them, why don't I invite anybody else who wants to be heard on the subject? Nobody?

Okay.

Well, here's my inclination. My inclination is to say that we can talk for a moment about what is PII here, and look, I hear a lot of what Mr. Schiavoni is saying. I'm sure they take very seriously their confidentiality obligations, and I'm sure anybody they hire would because they'd be well-advised by O'Melveny to do so. I have no doubt of that at all.

I also realize that there's some level of nonanonymity here if people have been filing things in a state court tort system. That's arguably a little bit different from what we ask people to do in a proof of claim form, arguably. I don't necessarily take it that that ethic should hold when we're talking about proofs of claim that we have asked people to file here that have a fair amount of data and a fair amount of narrative that might be very difficult for somebody to put to paper in the first place. It might be even more difficult for them to know it's being shared with others.

But to me, the linchpin of all this is, are we at a place now where I can say that an expert, or other professional, other than the people already covered by the Bar Date Order, needs to know the personal identifying information of a claimant. And to me, the answer right now is no.

There may come a time when that's more important because we've drilled down to something that is much more definable as a problem where that information is going to have to be disclosed to experts because the experts are doing something very particular to determine what's the right universe there, and is there overlap, is there fraud, is there duplication?

What I do think we should have right now is some protocol that allows the basic information outside of the PII, 1 2 but for the year of birth to be shared by the insurance companies with their experts/professionals. To the extent that they want to tell me later, there's a reason why we need to get 4 5 into the PII as well for them to perform some other function that I don't think is really materially in front of us right 6 now, I'm happy to hear that, but I'm not hearing it right now. So that's my direction here. Anybody want to divert 8 9 me or suggest something else? MR. SCHIAVONI: Your Honor, can I first -- Tanc 10 Schiavoni again. Can I just ask you a question? 11 12 THE COURT: Yeah. 13 MR. SCHIAVONI: What do you -- I apologize for this, but I'm not quite sure what you're referring to as PII. 14 15 THE COURT: Well, I mean, for example, if there's -there was -- in the Bar Date Order, if I remember correctly, 16 there was a notion that some -- there was going to be some way 17 18 to identify a claim without identifying a claimant, so these things are keyed in some way. 19 As far as I'm concerned, if that can be replicated 20 with the experts so that, for example, the name of the claimant 21 or maybe the address of the claimant or something else that 22 23 might reasonably identify the claimant as that person could be 24 shielded from the experts and professionals, then I think the other information I think is relevant to what experts do.

What

kind of a claim is this? How old was the claimant? What are the circumstances? How often did it happen? I think that's all something that an expert is going to need to look at to be able to advise the insurance companies about their responses to things like matrices and the other things that go into the way one resolves these issues. So is that helpful?

MR. SCHIAVONI: Yeah, I understand. Thank you, Your Honor. I understand. (Audio interference).

THE COURT: All right. Is anybody else -- no, Mr. Schiavoni, you go ahead. I keep cutting you off.

MR. SCHIAVONI: I'm sorry. That leaves us with the ability to sort of basically review the proof of claim to determine what is asserted there.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. SCHIAVONI: But Your Honor, if you remember, it's like the proofs of claim are not even signed. I think we're going to find when we get them, they're not even signed by the claimants. They're signed by lawyers. So it's like getting complaints without the names on them. We're not able to investigate independently what it's -- like, in other words, we're left with having to take in the complaint as fact, instead of investigate separately whether it's like actually reality, so to speak.

THE COURT: But I guess my question is, to what extent are the experts going to help you with that? That's not what -- that's just not clear to me right now.

MR. SCHIAVONI: Okay. So I'll tell you some things, but the more you push us, the more basically sort of we have to get into work product, but (audio interference).

THE COURT: Well, all right, then, I'll tell you what, then don't do that. Take my ruling for today and I'm reserving the idea if you need -- if you come back and tell me, well, look, the experts at this stage are specifically going to need more information than they have now, you can tell me that, and the committee can respond, and we can see what we do about giving notice to the claimants or anything else.

But for today's purposes, I think that the basic information in the proof of claim form should be shared, should be shareable, by the insurance companies with their experts without getting into what I'll call personal identifying information. Okay?

MR. SCHIAVONI: Your Honor, may I ask this? May we, at least, match for the experts for those claimants for whom we have publicly filed complaints, can we match those names to the to the POCs? I mean, we can take them with redactions, but we're able to --

THE COURT: I can imagine why that might strike the committee as problematic, so let me throw that to the committee.

MS. RESTEL: Sure. Again, Your Honor, the committee

doesn't have any issue with the publicly filed proofs of claim -- publicly filed complaints being shared, but it's a matter of matching it with the complaint and putting those pieces together. Suddenly, some of that PII may be shared or more information may be shared, and we just don't see the need for that at this time.

basis.

THE COURT: Well, let me resolve it this way. Okay?

I will leave that an open issue. Okay? I will let Mr.

Schiavoni or others tell me that, no, we need to do that match up. And at that point, I mean, the difference is we're arguably asking for different information for arguably different reasons and arguably at greater levels of detail depending on whether we're in a complaint or whether we're in a proof of claim form with a supplement.

At that point, Ms. Restel, it's going to be up to you to convince me that those differences are significant enough that it matters, that I shouldn't let Mr. Schiavoni match those up. Okay? Because I think that's going to be the issue. I mean, he may well be right that, look, it's public, and you may say, well, it's public, but there's something about the matching that's problematic because we're asking for something more, something different, something more embarrassing, something more traumatic in the proof of claim form.

You can make that argument, and I'll decide it on that Okay? Makes sense?

1 MS. RESTEL: Understood, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you very much. So to this extent, I am granting the insurance companies motion to the extent I'm suggesting today, that I think that information, other than what I'm loosely calling PII, should be shareable with the insurance companies, experts/professionals. And I will reserve for another day the question of whether other information, including this matching information, should be available to the experts.

And I'll let Mr. Schiavoni and others make that argument when it's appropriate to do so. I'll let the committee respond in the way I've suggested and possibly other ways as well. All right?

Okay. Thank you very much, everybody. And I'll see you guys on the 19th, right? Okay. Thank you.

THE CLERK: Your Honor, Mr. Plevin has his hand up.

THE COURT: I'm sorry. Somebody has their hand up?

Yeah.

MR. PLEVIN: Your Honor, Mark Plevin for Continental.

I had a question that perhaps the committee or the debtor could answer.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. PLEVIN: And I ask this question because I'm confused in my mind as to the different proof of claim forms and different cases and the drafts that we had that were accepted in part and not accepted in part. But at least some of these cases or drafts being negotiated among the cases, there's a checkbox for a claimant to say whether they want to maintain anonymity because some claimants don't. Some claimants are happy to have their information public. I mean, we've seen in other cases news conferences where claimants provide information about their claims.

And it would seem to me that if we have that feature on these proofs of claim and if a claimant has indicated through a checkbox that they don't want to maintain anonymity, that that information should not be subject to the restrictions that you've just ordered.

THE COURT: You may be right. So let me turn that to the committee, and then, depending on their answer, I've got another thought. Okay?

MS. RESTEL: Thank you, Your Honor. I think I would need to go back. As Mr. Plevin said, all of these proof of claim forms are a little different. I would need to take a minute to pull it up to see if that checkbox is there.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MS. RESTEL: I don't recall it being there, and I recall there being specific language that proofs of claim are all confidential. But again, I don't want to misspeak, and I would have to go back and look.

THE COURT: Well, I think that's a fair response. And when you do so, I know what I'll be doing, I'll be looking at 1

 2
    the claim Bar Date Order to see if there's anything in there 3
    that might have made it somewhat ambiguous what the effect of checking that box would be. I don't remember that either, but that will be the direction I'll be going.
             So if you wouldn't mind checking that and having a 6
7 conversation with Mr. Plevin, and if that's clarifiable in the order that Mr. Schiavoni and Mr. Plevin, I suggest, you're going to be drafting, then that's fine. Okay?
9
10
             MS. RESTEL: No problem, Your Honor.
             THE CLERK: Your Honor, Mr. Schiavoni also 11
    disconnected.
12
13
             THE COURT: Mr. Schiavoni might have dropped off.
                                                                 Was
    that -- 14
15
             THE CLERK:
                         Yes, Your Honor. Yes, Your Honor.
                         Do we know if that was -- 16
             THE COURT:
             THE CLERK: I believe Mr. Schiavoni thought the 17
    hearing had concluded.
18
19
             THE COURT: Well, Mr. Schiavoni has left us. Did 20
    you --
             MR. PLEVIN: I will talk to him, Your Honor. Do you 21
22
    want him to draft the order?
23
             THE COURT: Yeah. It can be for the reasons stated on 24
    the record. If he needs me to do it because he wants me to articulate something I said, he can let me know. But I think
```

25

22 that, as usual, we have a fairly broad discussion of these 1
    things when I have the privilege of having all of you in front of me. So for me, for the reasons stated on the record is usually sufficient. Okay?
 2
 5
             MR. PLEVIN: Yeah, I will talk to him, Your Honor.
 6
             THE COURT: All right. Thank you very much.
7
             MR. PLEVIN: Thank you, Your Honor.
             THE COURT:
                          Thank you.
8
 9
             MR. PLEVIN: Bye-bye.
             THE COURT: See you guys in two weeks.
